ad Weather in Eastern Belt Aggravates Bullish Feeling and Advance Comes.

Monday Afternoon, March 22. Higher prices in the cotton market suited from renewed support from te buil interests and covering by the sorts, one of the main reasons for it pparently being the unfavorable weather in at least half the beit over Sunday he storm brought general rains over wide area, causing further delay to rop work, which already has been the surface of concern, and this in connection with uneasiness among the shorts on with uneasiness among the shorts at the old-crop positions made a strong ombination. The result was that the arket closed with futurese in New Jan. 30.80 ork from 27 to 71 points net to the nood, and New Orieans 36 to 69 up. Jone was steady throughout and there as apparently little to encourage sell-rs.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON.

NEW ORLEANS, March 29.—Unfavorable weather conditions in the belt, too much rain in the eastern division and low temperatures in the western caused a higher range of prices in the cotton market today. During the first hour of business the active months were sent 48 to 53 points over last week's close, May rising to 28 55c and October to 22.5c. The opening was higher in the face of disappointing cables from Liverpool.

Considerable realizing came from the long side and it pared the advance down about a dollar a bale, but the market held steady on the large exports, total early clearances amounting to 43.190 bales. Late in the morning the trading months were 20 to 38 points over last week's close.
